

CAMERON D. CLARK is a Clinical Instructor in Berkeley's Policy Advocacy Clinic, leading student teams in state-level legislative campaigns to abolish administrative fines and fees imposed on youth who are involved in the criminal legal system. A civil rights attorney by training, Cameron joined Berkeley Law following fellowships with the Southern Poverty Law Center in New Orleans and the Texas Civil Rights Project in Houston. In each role, Cameron developed litigation and legislative advocacy to increase access to indigent defense, to challenge the practice of sentencing children to life without parole, and to eliminate the use of solitary confinement, among other projects. Cameron is a graduate of Harvard Law School and The University of Texas at Austin.
